

The Journal of Modern Hellenism

Established in 1984 by Harry J. Psomiades, the Journal of Modern Hellenism will remain an annual peer-review scholarly journal which has been published online since 2014. It is now a joint publication of The American Hellenic Institute Foundation (AHIF) and the Center for Byzantine and Modern Greek Studies (Queens College, CUNY) and is available online. It publishes essays dealing with the history, institutions, and culture of modern Greece from its origins to the present. This includes studies of Greek America and other Diaspora communities. The international outreach of the JMH has been enhanced with the establishment of associate editors in Greece, Cyprus, and nations that have vibrant Greek communities. An archive of prior issues is available online through Simon Fraser University at:

Submission Guidelines

The JMH encourages scholarly contributions from emerging and established scholars on the history, language, and culture of Greece and the Greek Diaspora, from middle Byzantium to the Modern Era. Hellenic Studies is at its foundations an interdisciplinary project, so we welcome contributions from the fields of History, Literary Studies, Anthropology, Archaeology, Paleography, Film Studies, and International Studies and any others that engage with the journals' themes.

Language

In order to reach the widest scholarly audience as possible, the JMH will only consider submissions in English. Quotations from primary and secondary sources in languages other than English are of course permissible, but should include a translation.

Word Limits

Short Notes / Letters: Less than 500 words

Articles: 10,000 – 12,000 words

Film / Book Reviews: 1,000 – 2,000 words

Reference Style

All submissions should conform to the Chicago Manual of Style, 16th Edition. Footnotes, not end-notes. All submissions should be written in Times New Roman, 12pt font, with one-inch margins throughout.

Submissions to peer-reviewed sections of the JMH should not include any information in the manuscript that could potentially identify the author, including in the document properties of the file.
